

Robert Micheletti, MD is a graduate of Stanford University and Duke University School of Medicine. He completed a combined residency in internal medicine and dermatology at the University of Pennsylvania, where he is now Assistant Professor of Dermatology and Medicine. He is the Chief of Hospital Dermatology at Penn as well as Chief of Dermatology at Pennsylvania Hospital. He also directs the Cutaneous Vasculitis Clinic in the Penn Vasculitis Center. He has clinical and research focuses in vasculitis, severe drug reactions, autoimmune blistering diseases, hidradenitis suppurativa, and other areas of complex medical dermatology.